Research profile

My core scientific interest and competence relate to herd health and welfare management, with a focus on evaluation and quantifying the value of procedures or decision support systems, including diagnostics. Practical research experience includes dairy cattle, veal calves, sows and piglets and aquaculture (salmon/trout) with focus on different aspects of health, welfare and production. The projects come from a combination of national funders, international (Horizon projects, Nordic projects), public sector consultancy on animal welfare and industry collaborations.

The methodological approach is primarily quantitative and focuses on deriving information from observational real-life data structures.
